Fortune in the Fire. Sweet Norah, come here, and look into the fire, Perhaps in its embers good luck we may see; But don't come too near, or your glances so burning Will put it clean out, like the sunbeam Machree!

Just look 'twixt the bars, where that black sod is smoking, There's a sweet little valley, with rivers and trees, And a house on the bank quite as big as the squire's:

Who knows but some day we'll have something like these? And now there's a coach, with four galloping horses, A coachman to drive, and a footman behind:

That shows that some day we will keep a fine carriage, And fly through the streets with the speed of the wind. As Dermot was speaking, the rain-drops were hissing Down through the wide chimney-the fire went out; While mansion and river, and horses and carriage

Then Norah to Dermot this speech softly whispered-"'Twere better to do, than to idly desire : And one little but by the road side is better

All vanished in smoke-wreaths that whirled about.

Than a palace, with servants and coach-in the fire !"

From the Spirit of the Times. How Yankee Silsbee got to see the Queen. It is something of a feat to catch a glimpse of her Majesty when she goes to the opera in state, as the ruffles and lace of the United Kingdom rush from their 12 00 country seats to London like a pack of harriers after unfortunate Reynard, so that everything like " squinting room or standing place" is magnificently bespoke by nobles and their "righte true ladye loves," all anxious to breathe the same air as their sovereign on this especial occasion. The hall of the Opera House is a jam-the streets leading to it ditto, and as for a box in the theatre-it cannot be had, as the saying goes, " for love or money." They have been bought a week or two before by astute speculators, who, having got wind in advance of the Queen's visit, are determined to make all they can out of the matter. A number of gentlemen, who had gone up to see her plump little Majesty at the close of the last season's opera, returned to Morley's Hotel with faces quite chop-fallen, and a dismal report of the impossibillity of getting their noses inside the great hall.

Josh Silsbee, the Comedian, was yawning over a heavy monetary article in the "Times," and spurring up like an old game cock, suddenly excited,

" Do you sa-a yeou can't get in, Smith?" "Get in!" growled Smith-it was Albert Smith, the famous author-" Curse me! they're as thick as six in a single bed-perfectly wedged, sir! You Yankees are blessed cute, as they say, but I think it would puzzle 'Uncle Sam' himself to get in this

"Would you like to hev me try it?" coolly remarked the comedian. " No. I should'nt for you'd get squeezed out of your wits, and then we'd loose you at the Adelphi," replied as Lord Chesterfield.

"Prchaps I would," rejoined Silsbee, rising and drawing himself up, "I don't often bet, but I'll tell you dressing Steele, who was in the carriage with us, what I'll du. There's six of us in this party, and I "now, the difficulty is for some people to keep out of Bermuda Arrow Root; Pul. Jalap; Pul. Rhubarb; Pul. Ipecae; Pul. Columbo; Pul. If I, for example, go to see the Belleville of the newspapers of the newspapers of the newspapers. bottles of wine that I get into the Hall in ten minutes leiste frigate, next morning its all in print! and who from the time I leave Trafalgar Square!"

" Done !" shouted Smith. " Done !" Silsbee then, without saying a word, made a curved bee line for Covent Garden, through the market, and down Great Russell street, followed by a self-constituted committee, consisting of Albert Smith, How-Paints, Dyc-Stuffs, Putty, and Oil .- White Lead, and Paul and two others, to see the thing done. He dashed through the throng outside of the doors, and tried to get one eye into the Hall. It was no go, Smith dry and in oil; Yellow Ochre, dry and in oil; Fire Proof Paint; Patent Zine Paint; Brushes, all sizes and kinds; Put- was right about the place being heavy packed, for where there was one vacancy there were twenty to take advantage of it.

At one peep the comedian saw that the aspect of a chance was dreadfully dark, and that to edge in augurreport progress. All at once his attention was attracted by a band of music in a wagon entering Bow street, wealth and splendor that surrounds many of the Enin which the Opera House is situated. The Bonapartes. Louis Napoleon may be said to be, in one sense, the legal successor of the Emperor Napoleon. His election at this time, is doubtless intended by him to be the restoration of the Empire under the Bonaparte dynasty. By the decree, or Senatus-consultum, which constituted Napoleon Emperor in 1801, the imperial succession was thus prescribed: 1st. To the lineal heirs, male, of Napoleon; in the order of primogeniture.

2d. Failing these, to such son or grandson of his brothers, as Napoleon might designate, and the heirs' male of such son or grandson. 3d. To Joseph Bonaparte and his heirs male. 4th. Failing these, to Louis Bonaparte, his heirs male, each in the order of primogeniture. The only son of Napoleon, the Duke of Reichstadt, died in 1832. Joseph, Ex King of Spain, the eldest brother of Napoleon, known as Count de Survilliers. and who resided for many years in New Jersey, died in 1845, leaving two daughters, but no son. Louis, Ex-King of Holland, the father of the present Louis Napoleon, died in 1846, shortly after the escape of the son from the fortress of Ham. Two elder sons of Louis and Hortense died, one in infancy, the other at the age of 27, leaving Louis Napoleon the only survivor, and the last in the prescribed succession. To this claim of quasi legitimacy it is propable Louis Napoleon alludes in his proclamation to the people of France: "If you believe in the cause of which my name is the symbol, that is, France regenerated by the revolution of '89, and organized by the Emperor, proclaim' Jerome, the youngest brother of Napoleon, sometime King of Westphalia, has addressed a letter to his nephew, "in the name of the memory of my brother, and partaking his horror of civil war," urging a republican and conciliatory policy. Napoleon, son of Jerome, is or was a member of the French general assembly. Lucien Bonaparte, Prince of Canino, died at Rome; leaving a numerous family; one of them the orinthologist, now or lately, prominent in the affairs of Rome and Italy. Pierre, another son, figured in the French national assembly; as also Murat, a son of the Marshal and Caroline, the sister of Napoleon. One of the daughters of Lucien is the wife of Lord Dudley Stuart, an English nobleman .- Cincinnati Gazette.

ANECDOTE OF O'CONNELL.-It is satisfactory to think, that at the present day it would not be easy to find such a specimen as this of episcopal "good nature." O'Connell mentioned a case in which he was professionally engaged-an action instituted by a Miss Fitzgerald against a Parson Hawkesworth, for a breech of promise of marriage "Hawkesworth," said he, "had certainly engaged the lady's affections very much. He had acquired fame enough to engage her ambition. He was a crack preacher-had been selected to preach before the Lord Lieutenant; his name occasionally Smith, who knows how to turn a compliment as well got into the newspapers, which then was not often the case with private persons, and no doubt his notoriety had its weight in the lady's calculations. Things are were along with me, and how we were received on board, just as if we were princes! But to return to Hawkesworth. The correspondence read upon trial, was comical enough. The lady, it appeared, had at one period doubted his fidelity; whereupon the Parson writes, to re-assure her, in these words: 'Don't believe any one who says I'll jilt you! They lie who say so, and I pray that al! such liars will be condemned to an eternity of itching, without the benefit of scratching.' Three thousand pounds damages were given against him, and he decamped to America upon a preaching speculation, which proved unsuccessful.

He came back to Ireland and married the prosecutrix !"
